Know when Aussie prices are behind the US market.

Australian bookmakers often take their lead on US sports from the American market, then catch up after it moves. Odds Ace checks 7 Aussie bookmakers against 8 major US sportsbooks 24 hours a day and sends a Telegram alert when an Aussie price is still on the old line.

- 3 The verdict: why the price looks slow

Illustrative examples: the games and prices are made up to show what alerts look like in the Odds Ace Telegram channels.

6

The first two figures come from every alert we have sent and update every hour. The gap is the average across all of them: the Aussie price in each alert against the US market's fair price at that moment, with the bookmakers' margin taken out. A few long-shot prices with very large gaps lift the average. It's a price difference, not a profit: prices move fast, and you can still lose.

HOW IT WORKS

THREE STEPS, AROUND THE CLOCK

01

The American market moves

02

Odds Ace spots the gap

03

You get a Telegram alert

Injury news, weather or a wave of money moves the line in America first.

24 hours a day, it checks TAB, Sportsbet, Neds, PointsBet, Unibet, Betr and Betfair against 8 major US sportsbooks.

The alert names the Aussie bookmakers still on the old price. Prices move fast, so a price may have gone by the time you look.

WHY IT'S DIFFERENT

BUILT AROUND THE US MARKET

Odds Ace doesn't compare Aussie bookmakers with each other. It measures every Aussie price against the American market, where US sports are priced first, and tells you when an Aussie bookmaker hasn't caught up. See how Odds Ace compares with other services.

Priced against America

Each Aussie price is checked against 8 major US sportsbooks, the market that sets US sports lines.

Weather built in

Open-air NFL and MLB games get a stadium wind and rain check, because wind moves totals.

Made for Australia

Australian-licensed bookmakers only (TAB, Sportsbet, Neds, PointsBet, Unibet, Betr and Betfair), Sydney kick-off times and decimal odds, sent to a private Telegram channel, with NFL, college football and NHL alerts also in channels of their own.

SPORTS

SIX LEAGUES, ALL YEAR ROUND

Something is on in every month of the year. Every alert goes to the main members' channel, and NFL, NHL and college football alerts also go to a channel of their own, so you can follow just those. Open-air NFL and MLB games also get a stadium weather flag, because wind and rain move lines too.

LEAGUE	SEASON	WEATHER FLAGS
NFL	September to February	Open-air stadiums
NBA	October to June	Indoor, not needed
NHL	October to June	Indoor, not needed
MLB	March to October	Open-air ballparks
College football	August to January	Not yet
College basketball	November to April	Indoor, not needed

RESULTS

EVERY ALERT, EVERY RESULT

Every alert sent to members, recorded at the Aussie price when it was flagged and settled from official box scores once the game ends. Wins, losses, pushes and voids all go in, and nothing is taken out afterwards. Alerts appear here once their game is settled.

The proof: every alert sent to members is also posted in our free public Telegram channel, t.me/oddsacerevents, after its game, with the time each alert went out, the Aussie price in the alert, the price before kick-off and the US price, wins and losses alike. Anyone can check it. Quarterly report: every alert this quarter with its final score and how it settled, plus breakdowns by sport, market, bookmaker and timing. Download the PDF or the spreadsheet \(CSV\); both are updated weekly.

How the alerted prices held up

83%

beat the US closing price (242 of 293 alerts)

+10.7%

average closing value against the US market

65%

had dropped by kick-off at the same bookmaker (143 of 220 alerts)

2 h 30 min

typical time an alerted Aussie price stayed on the old line

80%

still on the old price 30 minutes after the alert

Closing value compares each alerted Aussie price with the US market's fair price (margin removed) at the last check before the game: the alerted price × the US chance – 1. Above zero means the alert beat where the US market closed. Every alert sent counts once its game has started, voided bets aside. It measures price, not profit: you can still lose. After each alert, the Aussie price is checked again at each scan at the same bookmaker and line, until it drops or the game starts. A drop is timed halfway between the last check that found the old price and the first that didn't. Timings are based on 160 alerts followed from their first check. Kick-off figures use the last check before each game. A drop doesn't mean the alert won, only that the old price didn't last.

Paper results: no money is staked, and the record shows how alerted selections finished, not advice to bet. Real results are likely to be lower, because prices can move before you bet and bookmakers can limit accounts. Past results don't predict future results, and you can lose money betting. The vs US column compares the alerted Aussie price with the US market's fair price, margin removed, at the time of the alert; where the US market was on a different line, the fair price at the Aussie line is estimated.
