ABOUT ODDS ACE AUSTRALIA

Odds Ace Australia is a small, independent Australian business with one job: spotting when an Aussie bookmaker's price on a US game hasn't caught up with the American market.

It started with the wind

Odds Ace Australia didn't start in a boardroom. It started with an AFLW game and the wind.

Our founder, Tony Chalhoub, got into the habit of checking the weather before AFLW games, especially the wind. Knowing it was windy wasn't enough: the direction mattered. Was it blowing across the ground, or from one end to the other? How would that change the way the game was played? And had the betting market allowed for it in the price?

That habit led to a much bigger question: what information is out there before it's fully reflected in the price?

From AFLW to the US market

Over years of betting, Tony became more and more focused on how information, timing and price fit together. Weather is only one part of it: injuries, team changes, scheduling, travel and money moving the market all change how a game is priced.

Finding a price is only half of it, too. Bookmakers react quickly, move their prices and can limit accounts, so knowing where a price is available and how fast it's likely to move matters just as much.

Then came American sports. We kept seeing the US market move while prices in Australia hadn't caught up yet: the same idea as the AFLW wind, on a much bigger scale. Information changes. Markets react. But they don't always react at the same time. That's what Odds Ace Australia is built on.

Who's behind it

Odds Ace Australia is run by Tony Chalhoub, an Australian sole trader based in Melbourne (ABN 38 722 496 289).

We didn't set out to build another betting website. We built the system we wanted to use ourselves. The scanner, the alerts, the results and this website are all our own work, and members' subscriptions are the only thing that pays for them.

What we do

Around the clock, Odds Ace checks 7 Australian-licensed bookmakers (TAB, Sportsbet, Neds, PointsBet, Unibet, Betr and Betfair) against 8 major US sportsbooks on the NFL, NBA, NHL, MLB, college football and college basketball. When an Aussie price is out of line with the US market, members get an alert in a private Telegram channel. Open-air NFL and MLB games also get a stadium weather check.

Each alert answers four questions at a glance:

- What has changed? Whether the US line or price has moved, and when.
- Where is the price? The Aussie bookmaker and its price.
- How big is the difference? The Aussie price against the US reference price (the US market's price with its margin removed), as a gap.
- What's behind the gap? A plain note on what we can see behind it, such as a move in the US market or team news, or that no US move was recorded.

No dashboards and no screens full of thousands of markets: just the information, set out clearly.

Personal, and fully automatic

You shouldn't have to spend all day looking for prices. The technology should do the looking for you.

When you join, your personal invite link to the members' Telegram channel arrives by email within minutes. From then on the scanning, the price re-checks and the alerts all run on their own, day and night, with nothing to log in to and nothing to set up. Every member gets the same alerts, and you can mute the channel whenever you want a break.

From the wind to the market

The technology has come a long way from checking the wind before an AFLW game, but the idea hasn't changed: look deeper, understand what's moving the market, spot when information and price aren't moving together, and make that easy to see. It started with the wind. Today, the technology watches the market.

Why we publish every result

Anyone can claim results; we'd rather show them. Every alert is recorded at the price it was flagged at and settled from the final score, wins and losses alike. The full record is in the results on our home page, and every alert in the results is also in our free public Telegram channel, t.me/oddsaceresults.

Being right about a result isn't the only thing that matters: the price you take matters too. A better price doesn't guarantee a winning bet, and no legitimate betting system can guarantee results. What a clear view of prices and market moves gives you is better information for your own decisions.

What we're not

- Not a bookmaker. We don't take or place bets, hold your money or act for any bookmaker. Odds Ace is an independent wagering-market analytics service, and bookmaker prices are shown for comparison and analysis.
- Not a tipster. We don't predict results or promise wins. Alerts are information, and you decide what to do with them.
- Not paid by bookmakers. No affiliate links, no commissions, no sponsorships.
