Know when Aussie prices are behind the US market.

Australian bookmakers often take their lead on US sports from the American market, then catch up after it moves. Odds Ace checks 7 Aussie bookmakers against 8 major US sportsbooks 24 hours a day and sends a Telegram alert when an Aussie price is out of line with the US market.

How it works

THREE STEPS, AROUND THE CLOCK

The American market moves

Injury news, weather or a wave of money moves the line in America first.

Odds Ace spots the gap

24 hours a day, it checks TAB, Sportsbet, Neds, PointsBet, Unibet, Betr and Betfair against 8 major US sportsbooks.

You get a Telegram alert

The alert names the Aussie bookmaker and its price, the US reference price, the gap, and whether the US line has moved. Prices move fast, so a price may have gone by the time you look.

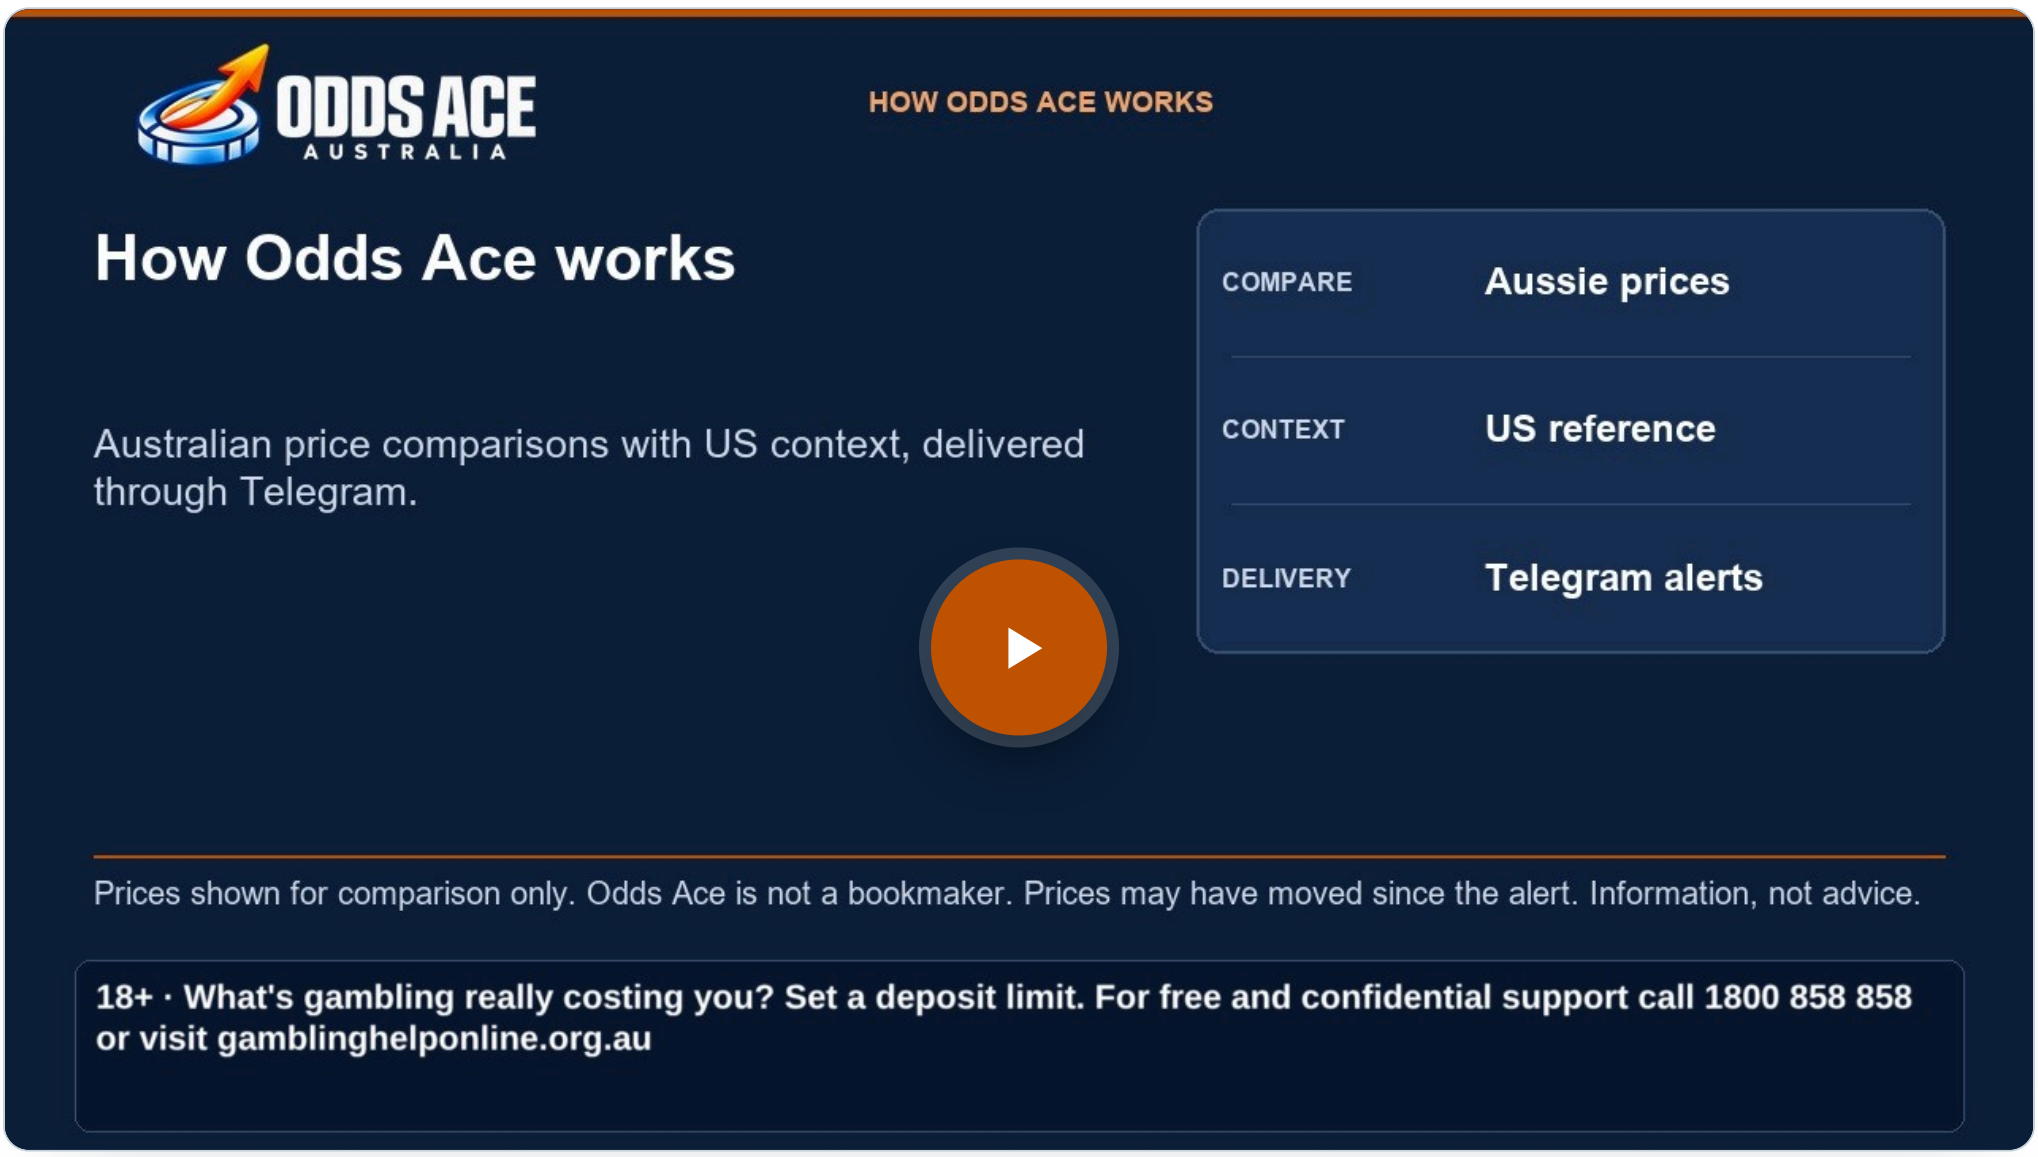

Our method: how the US reference price (margin removed) is worked out, and when an alert goes out. Read it in full

Why it's different

BUILT AROUND THE US MARKET

Odds Ace doesn't compare Aussie bookmakers with each other. It measures every Aussie price against the American market, where US sports are priced first, and tells you when an Aussie bookmaker hasn't caught up.

Priced against America

Each Aussie price is checked against 8 major US sportsbooks, the market that Something is on in every month of the year. Every alert, for every league, goes to one private members' channel. Open-air NFL and MLB games also get a stadium weather flag, because wind and rain move lines too.

EVERY ALERT, EVERY RESULT

Every alert since our scans started on 29 September 2026 (the members' channel opened on 2 October), recorded at the Aussie price when it was flagged and settled from official box scores once the game ends. Wins, losses, pushes and voids all go in, and nothing is taken out afterwards. Alerts appear here once their game is settled.

Public verification record: every alert in these results is also posted in our free public Telegram channel, t.me/oddsaceresults, after its game, with the time each alert went out, the Aussie price in the alert, the price before kick-off and the US price, wins and losses alike. Anyone can check it. Quarterly report: every alert this quarter with its final score and how it settled, plus breakdowns by sport, market, bookmaker and timing. Download the PDF or the spreadsheet (CSV); both are updated weekly.

160 of 347
alerted Aussie prices that moved at least halfway to the US price before the start (the US price moved to the Aussie one 84 times)

After each alert we keep checking the same bookmaker's price until it drops or the game starts, and time a drop halfway between the last check that found the alerted price and the first that didn't. Based on 380 alerts followed from their first check. A drop doesn't mean the alert won. Of the 347 alerts with both closing prices recorded, the Aussie price closed 68% of the gap on average before the start, and the US price 26%.

Each odds check adds up the Aussie prices it matched with a US market price, so a price checked again in a later check counts again. A full check looks across the coming games; a pre-game check only at games starting within 2 hours. Kept back: alerts recorded but not sent (gaps over 40%, and the kinds Our method lists as tracked only). Counted since 12 October 2026, when the checks started recording it, and updated twice a day.

SPORT	SETTLED	WON–LOST	PAPER UNITS	ROI	EXPECTED	CLOSING VALUE	BEAT THE CLOSE
NFL	770	356–387	+49.3	+6.6%	+91.2	+7.7%	562 of 682

Paper units and ROI are hypothetical: 1 unit on every alert at its alerted price, with no money staked; pushes and voids are left out, and ± is how far luck alone could move the ROI (95% of the time). Expected is the paper units the US reference prices at each alert pointed to. Closing value is the alerted price against the US reference price at the last check before the game. Small groups swing a lot: read the counts before the averages. Real results are likely to be lower, and past results don't predict future ones.

Paper results: no money is staked, and the record shows how alerted selections finished, not advice to bet. Real results are likely to be lower, because prices can move before you bet and bookmakers can limit accounts. Past results don't predict future results, and you can lose money betting. The vs US column compares the alerted Aussie price with the US reference price (margin removed) at the time of the alert; where the US market was on a different line, the reference price at the Aussie line is estimated (how it's worked out). Bookmaker prices are shown for market comparison and analysis: Odds Ace doesn't accept bets and isn't paid by any bookmaker. The Closing value column shows whether the alerted price beat the US reference price at the last check before the game (✓) or not (×); a dash means there was no check before the game. Sharp-money alerts (sent until 21 October 2026) went out because of where the US money went, not for a price gap, so their vs US figure can be below zero.
